Reports from Area Correspondents

In Australia

At the recent Sixth Conference of the History of Economic Thought Society of Australia, held at Monash University July 2-5, 1991, several of the 19 papers presented had themes that may be of interest to methodologists.

Gillis Maclean (University of Auckland), in his paper "Positivism and Instrumentalism before Friedman: Instrumentalism in Hutchison's The Significance and Basic Postulates of Economic Theory", argued that the treatment of positivism and instrumentalism as incompatible methodologies has been shown to be false by Popper. A consequence of this is that Hutchison's logical positivist position can be read as taking on an instrumentalist form, thus suggesting that this latter methodology, usually associated with Milton Friedman in economics, has rather a longer history. Moreover, Maclean showed that the Hutchison version of positive instrumentalism can be aligned with the work of Ramsay and Schlick, thus linking instrumentalism to deeper recesses of its history.

Jan Toporowski (South Bank Polytechnic, London) presented a paper entitled "Two Enigmas in Kalecki's Methodology", in which he considered the weighting given in Kalecki's work to empirical and intuitive sources of the premises upon which he based his theoretical arguments. Much of Kalecki's abstract theoretical argument suggests an intuitive-deductive methodology. Toporowski's view is rather that Kalecki's preference was to give most emphasis to deductive reasoning from empirically-derived premises. Then, given his background in Marx rather than in Marshall, he worked out his theoretical analyses independently of contemporary debates on similar themes going on around him. While this tended to isolate him intellectually at the time, it suggests that perhaps there is a legitimate role for theory that is not tied to existing debates in some scholastic way.

Warren Young and William Darity Jr. (Deakin University) gave a paper on the theme "IS/LM: an Inquest" in which they provided a detailed comparative survey of what a wide range of economic analysts have made of the endeavor to formalize Keynes's General Theory. They concluded that while the IS/LM version has established its pedagogic credentials in macroeconomics, its veracity as a representation of even the essentials of Keynes's contribution remains controversial. Simon Chapple (Victoria University of Wellington) also considered the status of this analytical framework in his paper "Kalecki and IS/LM interpretation of the General Theory". Chapple's argument was that although it has been claimed, at least by Don Patinkin, that Kalecki's work represents an incomplete prior formulation of what has been shown to be derivable from the General Theory, a recently translated paper from 1934 reveals a much more comprehensive model that rivals, and in some ways reaches beyond, the substantive scope of the IS/LM/AS version of Keynes's message.

Peter Kriesler's (University of New South Wales) contribution to the conference comprised an exploration of some of the issues raised by using the little-known concept of the traverse as an organizing framework for the analysis of motion in economic systems. In his paper entitled "Traverses in Economic Theory", he showed that an awareness of the traverse idea serves to emphasize that a proper comprehension of growth and fluctuations depends upon understanding the conditions and sequential events that constitute the disequilibrium states that the economy passes through.

Richard Nolan (University of New South Wales) presented a paper on the theme "The Use of Entropy as a Concept in Economic Thought and Economic Analysis" in which he showed how Georgescu-Roegen had used the concept in his endeavors to define more completely the natural conditions under which economic activity must take place. This enabled Georgescu-Roegen to broaden the scope of what we define to be an economic system. Nolan's objective was to give some indications of the further potential that the concept has to advance our methodological and substantive understanding of economic systems. This potential, he concluded, remains largely unrecognized.

A conference on Interdisciplinary Approaches to the Study of Economic Problems was arranged in Stockholm by Professor Sven-Erik Sjostrand (The Stockholm School of Economics) on behalf of the Society for the Advancement of Socio-Economics (SASE) in collaboration with Professor Karl-Eric Wameryd (the Stockholm School of Economics) on behalf of the International Association for Research in Economic Psychology (IAREP). This joint conference was carried out at the Stockholm School of Economics in June 16-19, 1991.

More than 450 researchers from around thirty countries from all over the world participated during the conference. Nine keynote addresses were delivered and more than 300 full length papers were presented. The first part of the theme of the conference - Interdisciplinary Approaches - was reflected in the presence of social and economic scientists from more than ten different disciplines, including especially researchers from the fields of economics, sociology, economic psychology, organization theory, political science, and economic history.

The second part of the theme of the conference - "to the Study of Economic Problems" - was expressed in the focus on the following topics, e.g., "Institutional Economics", "Ethics in the Economic and Social Sciences", "Labor Market Issues", "Socio-Economic Methods", "Experimental Economics", "the Socio-Economic Analyses", "the Consumer and the Market Place" and "Risk and Decision Theory". Moreover one whole day was devoted to research describing and analyzing the Current Development in Eastern Europe. A panel composed of Vladimir Dlouhy (Minister for Public Affairs of the Czech and Slovak Republic), Jerzy Osiatynski (member of the Polish parliament), Gyorgy Suranyi (president of the National Bank of Hungary) and Anders Aslund (professor at the Stockholm School of Economics) discussed transitional problems and opportunities in Eastern Europe.

Professor Sven-Erik Sjostrand is currently editing a thematic volume which will include some of the most interesting papers presented at this Stockholm conference. The title of this forthcoming (September, 1992) volume is "Institutional Change: Theory and Empirical Findings" (1992; New York: ME Sharpe).

Sven-Erik Sjostrand
SASE Conference Chairman
To the membership of the International Network for Economic Method

It is with great pleasure that I can now inform you that Henry Woo and I are entering into a contract with Edward Elgar Publishing Ltd. to publish a series of books on the methodology of economics under the auspices of the Network. We negotiated for several months with a number of publishers, eventually with three any one of which would have been highly desirable, and, after a process which took much longer than I had anticipated, we have chosen Elgar. Edward Elgar is very enthusiastic about the series and we look forward to working with him.

An editorial board has been appointed and we are ready to begin. A list of the editorial board is attached. The first steps are the recruitment of sub-series editors and the authors and editors of the first volumes. All proposals and volumes in the series will be subject to a careful review process. Elgar will rely upon our reviewing process and not use independent reviewers unless we jointly decide that this would be a useful thing to do.

Our review process with regard to, first, proposals and, second, manuscripts should be flexible but with the cooperation of all parties the principal processes should be generally as follows.

* Sub-series editors, individual board members, and the general editor will consider proposals (some or many of which they have solicited) and may refer them to any other member of the board or any other person for advice. When a sub-series editor believes that a proposal is ready for a contract, the proposal will be sent to me and, unless I have some questions, the proposal will then be forwarded to Elgar with our recommendation that a contract be issued; otherwise, after questions are resolved.

* Sub-series editors, individual board members, and the general editor will work with volume authors and editors to facilitate the preparation of the final manuscript. The sub-series editor, or individual board member, and the general editor will review and agree that a manuscript is ready to be sent to the publisher with our recommendation that it be published.

* Sub-series editors will have general responsibility for their respective areas. Individual board members have the freedom to solicit and promote individual proposals. If each person is sensitive to the feelings of others, there should be no conflicts or problems. When I receive a proposal from a board member I will consider whether someone else might profitably be consulted. The assumption is that all parties have an interest in the strongest possible product. The organizational principle is to elicit as much expert energy from board members as possible.

I reiterate these arrangements are the general rule and that their application can be flexible. Our arrangement with Elgar requires a careful peer review process at the stages of proposal and completed manuscript. Having a sub-series editor, or board member, and the general editor approve a proposal or a manuscript— which are key steps in the process— will essentially constitute the decision to issue a contract and later the decision to publish, and we need to be serious, dedicated, and effective.

The series is open to all points of view; proposals and manuscripts will be appraised on the basis of the substantive contribution which they make to their field of inquiry. We have no agenda other than the advancement of our field and the enhancement of the Network.

I am forgoing all royalties that might otherwise be paid to me as general editor of the series, and I expect that sub-series editors will do likewise. In lieu of such payments Elgar is paying to the Network a sliding scale of royalties on each book sold.

The foregoing describes the arrangements with which we are commencing the series. Your individual input is very important, for it is you who must submit proposals and either write or edit books for the series. Eventually you will receive another letter indicating the names of sub-series editors. I have waited until now to recruit sub-series editors in order to have the terms of the contract completed. Please feel free to write me or any editorial board member with suggestions and ideas for proposals.

I believe that this is an exciting venture and I am looking forward to working with you as general editor. Together we can further promote the development of the field of methodology in economics.

Yours sincerely,

[Signature]

Minutes of the Second Executive Committee Meeting held on Tuesday, 8th October, 1991 at 6:30 p.m.
in Room 603, Hung On Mansion, 177-181 Jaffe Road,
Wanchai, Hong Kong

Present : Mr. Henry Woo (in the chair)
          Mr. Alan Wong
          Dr. Victor Mok
          Mr. Carson Chan (Secretary)

In Attendance : Ms. Alice Ma

Apologies : Prof. Daniel Fusfeld, K. W. Li

1. In the absence of Professor Daniel Fusfeld, the Chairman, Mr. Henry Woo, the Executive Director, chaired the meeting.
2. The opening of a merchant account with American Express for credit card payment was ratified and confirmed.
3. Mr. Henry Woo reported the latest development of the Network’s proposed book series on economic methodology. To facilitate the selection of authors, titles and publisher, Professor Warren Samuels had agreed to act as Editor of the book series. After careful consideration, both Professor Samuels and Mr. Woo agreed that out of the internationally renowned publishers that had indicated interest and made offers in becoming the publisher for the book series, they would recommend Edward Elgar Publishing Ltd. to this committee for the job.
   In this connection, it was unanimously resolved that:
   (a) the appointment of Professor Warren Samuels as Editor of the book series be ratified; and
   (b) Edward Elgar Publishing Ltd. be appointed as publisher of the book series on terms and conditions agreeable to both the Editor of the book series and the Executive Director of the Network.
4. There being no further business, the meeting concluded at 7:00 p.m.

Obituary

Jack Wiseman (1919 - 1991)

Jack Wiseman, a founding member of the Network, passed away in January 1991 at his home in Yorkshire at the age of 71.

Brought up by a poor family in the English midlands, Wiseman completed his studies at the London School of Economics (L.S.E.) with scholarship. His student life at L.S.E. was extraordinarily affluent and had inspired him to pursue an academic career. Since graduation, Wiseman continued lecturing in L.S.E. until 1964, when he joined the then newly established University of York. In York, Wiseman set up a program in public finance together with Alan Peacock and worked closely with Stephen Littlechild and James Buchanan until he retired in 1987. Before his death, Wiseman was a visitor at Virginia Tech's Center for the Public Choice and dedicated to developing the "new political economy", a grand reconstruction of economic science.

The death of Jack Wiseman is a loss to all his friends and colleagues in the Network and as an independent thinker, he will always be remembered by us all.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Joint AEA-Network Session 1992

The Network will hold a joint session entitled "What is Rational Action?" with the American Economic Association (AEA) in the latter’s forthcoming annual meeting to be held on January 3-7, 1992 in New Orleans, Louisiana. Professor Daniel Fusfeld will be presiding over the meeting and papers to be presented thereat will include:

- Richard R. Levins, University of Minnesota
  "On Economic Agents Who Solve Equations"
- Cynthia Browning, Bates College
  "Investment Decisions Under Uncertainty"

Discussants in this conference will include Daniel M. Hausman, University of Wisconsin, and Robert H. Frank, Cornell University.

Joint AEA-Network Session 1993 - call for papers

The Network is planning to sponsor at least one session of papers and discussion at the annual meeting of AEA in Anaheim, California on January 5-7, 1993. If you would like to present a paper in the session, please send a prospectus of no more than one double-spaced typewritten page to Professor Daniel Fusfeld, Department of Economics, University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, MI 48109, U.S.A.

If you would like to be a discussant, please notify Professor Fusfeld.

Call for Contributions

The next issue of Methodus bulletin will be published in June, 1992. We call for formal and informal contributions in the general area of economic methodology as well as papers related to the symposium topic THE MEANING AND PURPOSES OF POLITICAL ECONOMY.

Papers can be sent at any time throughout the year but deadline for submission to the June, 1992 issue is April 15, 1992.

When preparing submissions, please follow the guidelines listed below:

1. Manuscripts should be type-written on one side of the paper, double-spaced with sufficient margins.

2. Manuscripts should preferably not exceed 30 pages. They should be carefully checked and considered final.

3. All pages should be numbered consecutively. The first page should contain the article title, name(s) and institutional affiliation(s) of the author(s), and the present address of the author to be contacted.

4. Acknowledgements (if any) should be given in a note at end of the article before the Endnote.

5. Endnotes should be used instead of Footnotes. They should be numbered consecutively and kept to a minimum.

6. References should include only the most relevant items. They should be arranged according to ascending alphabetical order of the last names of authors, and be complete in respect of year and place of publication, pages etc.

7. To facilitate production, articles on computer diskettes can be submitted. We accept ASCII Text File, Pagemaker 4.0 File, Microsoft Word File and Word Perfect 5.0 File with hard copies.

8. Upon acceptance of publication, author(s) will be asked to transfer copyright to the publisher.

Save for papers related to the Book Review Column, all papers and enquiries should be directed to:-
